

AUTUMN

SIMON GAMA

NEW YORK / 2025

Built like a wall. Made to keep going.

AUTUMN, 2025

These four small paintings were made in the fall of 2025, during a hard season. Simon Gama built their surfaces as he builds walls at work: house-paint primer, followed by white household paint mixed with wall filler and shaped by hand.

A painting about the place where life put me, and the way out of the dark.

Ivory, charcoal and black carry the series. Raised material holds the marks of construction; buried photographs and emerging forms turn the surface into a place for identity, pressure and persistence.

Household paint, wall filler and spray paint give these small canvases the physical presence of a built surface. Each work is a unique original, presented in a black frame.
